

Hayley Gravina

Music has always been a lifelong passion of mine. Ever since I picked up the trombone in my primary school's concert band, I've been hooked. That first experience sparked a love for music that continues to grow every day.

I'm constantly learning, exploring new styles, and expanding my skills. Alongside trombone, I also play trumpet, saxophone, and clarinet, which has given me a well-rounded understanding of brass and woodwind instruments that I hope to pass on to my students. I have been a part of many bands playing at numerous music festivals and other events such as the Warwick Jazz Festival and International Chengdu Music Festival.

I play all music styles from classical to rock but the genre I am most interested in is jazz which I am currently studying at the Queensland Conservatorium of Music. I am extremely passionate about sharing my knowledge and love of music and jazz. Being a past student of Marymount and a member of its band program, I am deeply committed to helping grow the brass/woodwind instrumental music program. Whether students are interested in jazz, classical, pop, or anything in between, my goal is to support them in discovering their own passion and enjoy the journey of making music.
